What we do

- Defending the raw materials palette
- Recognition of perfume creations as works of the mind and of the intelligence, excluding any legal notion and content which could be linked to it.
- Development of cultural projects
- Advice and transmission of knowledge to educational institutions
- Expertise (study on patents, copyrights, trademarks in the perfume industry for all geographical areas)

Who we are

Convinced that perfume creation must be recognized as a profession of craftsmanship and a work of the mind, on a global scale and with the same criteria everywhere, the International Society of Perfumer-Creators (ISPC) was created in 2014. It brings together more than 330 perfumers from fine fragrances, personal care and home care, from all cultures and geographical regions. All eager to protect their interests, they share their experiences, learn from each other and pass on their knowledge. To be more collectively aware of who we are, we need to promote the cultural heritage of the industry, to protect the perfumer palette and the know-how of perfume composition, to connect professionals and organizations, and to establish itself as the reference on an international scale. All of these principals are some of the missions of the ISPC.

Over the past year, we also have kept working on our first- ever Perfumer-Creator Charter which establishes a framework of common standards and rules as well as a code of ethics. Its purpose is to codify and protect the title of Perfumer-Creator worldwide, as well as the unique cultural heritage associated with perfume creation.

The ISPC is your voice. Join us to make it heard!
